Dear Glen,

As you know, I am a schizophrenic. It is a disabling disease involving hallucinations, thought insertion, and delusions. My auditory verbal hallucinations are harrowing, and they keep saying terrible things about you.

I have included with this letter an approach to managing them that I have developed myself. My psychiatrist and social worker both know about it, and I have an impending ethics review with the NSW State Government pending approval about this research. Please read the research summary if you are concerned about my next request.

My voices relentlessly insist that you used to be known as Ronald Thiessen. My ability to distract them from this strange and baseless claim is insufficient to refute or quieten them. I have also included with this letter, a statutory declaration containing only one statement.

Would you please help a suffering and nearly suicidal student by signing the declaration, and placing the signed declaration into the stamped addressed envelope, and posting the envelope.

Sorry to take your time. Sorry this is so bizarre.

Regards,

Scott
